Everlastings placed second to looking after rescued lambs

Wow, our time is now fully occupied with looking after the lambs: Valery (who was left by her mother), Billyoats (abandoned),

Lindsay (a twin, whose mum chose to care for her sibling), and Stevie (who got caught in a fence). It's a big responsibility, so no trips away for us!

PS. Names were inspired by the music playing in the ute when we discovered the lamb.

Here's a photo of our Kubota inspecting the crops. Side-by-side vehicles are much safer than quad bikes, which is why we've been using them for about 15 years now —no quad bikes for us! The dogs also prefer them much more!

This is a picture of wheat, sown in April. Beautiful establishment and now awaiting its first dose of Nitrogen. For the rest of the growing season, we keep a close check on fungal diseases or an attack by pests.

Can you believe canola? It's incredible how bright yellow it is—almost blinding! It's such a prolific crop across the country, with farmers planting it in broadacre amounts everywhere. Just go for a quick drive out into the country to see it! Incredible 😊 (please make sure not to trespass in taking a photo, seek permission first).

Check out this shipment of our products that arrived this week—so exciting! We have new packaging that prominently features the water-wise logo. Everlastings require minimal water, so we thought it was important to highlight that!

Testing on the Everlastings is crucial for our progress. We recently invested in a new Cropcare trial spray pack to ensure our everlastings are free of weeds. We definitely can't sell packets containing weed seeds!

These new Wick and Grow beds are fantastic! The Everlastings are thriving, and I never have to worry about running out of water thanks to the wick!

This new shed is incredibly exciting! It will help solve our storage issues and protect our machinery from rain and harsh sunlight, ensuring they last longer.
